WESTERLY EPISCOPAL CHURCH

To Celebrate Seventy-Fifth Anniversary On Sunday and Monday Next—Search for Burglars with Bags—Jug of Kerosene May Serve to Identify Fire Bug—Death of Mrs. Michael Collins.

The local police are on the trail of two young fellows suspected of being the pair who burglarized the Charles W. Willard company hardware store a week ago. On the night of the burglary two young men carrying bags were seen crossing the new railroad bridge over the Pawcatuck, from Westerly to the Pawcatuck side of the river. Near the river bank they stopped and examination of the contents of the bags were made, and in the opinion of one who saw the proceedings, but did not know of the proceedings, at the time, they were evidently dividing the spoils. This done, they went across the Welch lot in the direction of Newton avenue.

This leads to the belief that the burglars are residents of Pawcatuck or vicinity, as the break was without doubt the work of non-professionals. It is probable that the Willard burglars are the same who robbed the Given store several months ago, as entry was made in the same way, the same class of goods stolen, and there was no attempt in either case to secure cash.

The clue that may lead to the arrest of the firebug in the British club fire is the jug that contained kerosene and which was found in the telephone booth.

A careful examination of the jug shows that it had not been used regularly as a receptacle for kerosene, and was pressed into service for a special purpose. There are conditions connected with that jug that were evidently overlooked by the man who used it in connection with the British club fire and which may lead directly to his detection and arrest.

As early as 1746 there is record of Episcopal service being held in Westerly, and no theatre no regularly embodied church here until nearly a century afterward. In 1832 Rev. Erasmus DeWitt, a missionary of the Rhode Island conference, preached in Westerly for seven months. In the year following Rev. John A. Clark, another missionary of the conference, held meetings and was instrumental in organizing the present Episcopal church in Westerly, which dates from Nov. 24, 1834. The first pastor was Rev. James Pratt. In 1836 an edifice was erected in Union street at a cost of $6,000 and consecrated as Christ Episcopal church. This church in 1851 was destroyed by fire and a new structure was erected on the site at a cost of $20,000. This building is now owned and occupied by the Westerly division of the order of Hibernians, and is known as Hibernian hall. Subsequently the present magnificent
